Subject: Employee Suggestion Regarding a
Program for Responding to Terrorist
Incidents

The attached suggestion strikes me as being on a reasonable track but going too far. Rather than reassuring employees, I expect that a program such as that proposed would raise anxiety levels considerably. On the other hand, we probably should be doing something in the way of being prepared short of taking over tasks that rightly belong in the local fire and rescue department.

Would you get a couple of appropriate DA people together to noodle this one? I would be interested knowing: 1) what we have in place now, if anything, that could respond to one or more of our outbuildings being severely damaged by terrorists; and 2) what would be prudent to set up.

Would appreciate a response in a week or so.
